CHICAGO - LAKESIDE a fine thing, but you can't get much board on it in this town."

"Can I come in?"

A young man whose clothes were suspiciously new, and upon whose face there was a complacent, selfeatisfied expression, stood in the door-way of the editorial rooms and propounded the above interrogatory in a very loud and declamatory tone of

"I suppose you o.n," said the horse reporter, "unless you are af-flicted with some constitutional malady which prevents you from putting one toot in front of the other, or have got a pair of hobbles on. There have been some daisy fellows come up here lately, but you are the first onethat wanted to know whether he could go through an open door."

"I didn't exactly mean that," continued the young man. "What I wanted to know was if I could come infolthe room for a few minutes."

"You might," replid the horse reporter," if you were to go up attire and fall ever some type, but not otherwise at present."

"Unicuta and great skin curss)

PSORIASIS.

H, E. (a-pent otherwise at present."

Y, cured of P.

Certainly you can; only don't say snything to the effect that we cught to have a pleasant summer after such a rainy spring, or you may find yourself a pallid corpse in the dorjon beneath the turrets of the caste. It you are looking for the Hawkseille Clarion, or the Grandy County Fulladium, you will find them in that pile of papers over in the corner. If you are aweary and would fain woo the drowsy god, ask the man in the next room for the Boston Adcertiser. A Boston paper will make insomnia fire away as the black wrath of despair and desolution vanish before the golden rays of hope. Don't mistake you haggard paste-pot for a cup-custard, because in its contents there is a generous mixture of deceased cockroaches that but a few short days ago were members of happy family circles—now, alas, sundered by the cruel hand of a darksome and unrelenting fats."

"I didn't was to read any ex-changes, said he young man. "The object of my visit was to see the principal editor—the one who makes engagements with journalists."

"The what?" "The editor who makes engage-ments with journalists,"

"On, you mean the man who hires the hands. He's in the other room.

Do you want a job?"
"Well," said the young man in a rather baughty manner, "I have some thoughts of entering the journalistic profession." "You mean that you want to hire out as a deck hand on a newspaper, don't you?"

don't you?"

"Perhaps that is your way of expressing it, sir," said the young man, "but our professor of rhetoric told us that—"

"On, you're a collegiate graduate are you?" said the horse reporter. I thought you had a kind of I-shallnow go-forth-and-take-charge-of-aistairs air about you. I suppose you graduated last week?"

"Yes sir," was the reply. and I may say that my oration—"

"I know all about it," interrupted the horse reporter. "You spoke a piece about Life's Mission," or "Our Country's Fature," or something the horse reporter. "You spoke a piece about 'Life's Mission,' or 'Our Country's Fature,' or something like that, and when you had finished it the young lady in the percale dress whom you have been taking to the weekly mastice."

an all ordinary complaints it cures at once.

All diseases are eliminated from the system by what may be roughly called expulsion or extraction, or by a union of the twy processes. Beneon's Plaster promotes both.

It incites the technique. like that, and when you had finished it the young lady in the percale dress whom you have been taking to the weekly meetings pf the Platonian Literary Society for the last two years sent a big boquet up to the platform for you, with a little piece of rose tinted note paper in the centre of it, with 'from one who admires genius' written on it. And then a lot of Teutonic musicians blew themselves black in the face playing the 'Star Spangled Banner.' And in the evening you went to the president's reception with the female admirer of genius, and on the way admirer of genius, and on the way home you told her that now you were action, to go forth and do battle with the world, and carve for yourself a niche high in the temple of fame, you felt that you must tell her how your whole existence was wrapped up in a pure, holy love for her—a love that would never falter or fade as long as life remained. And then she laid her head trustfully on your manly breast, and said that she would not try to conceal from you the fact, ever present in her heart, that you were the one man in the wide, wide world upon whom she could bestow that most precious of all gifts—the tender, true and all-absorbing love of a pure weman. But in about five years things will look different. There are more young men that started out to carve a niche high in the temple of fame chasing large red steers over the arid plains of Texas, or delivering mackerel to the first families than you can shake a etick

81. "But surely, sir, you do not mean to insinuate that a college education is in any way a hindrance to the sccomplishment of these ends which it should ever be the sim of all who have the welfare of their country at heart to bring about."

"That's just the trouble," said the horse reporter. "You college graduates always stort out with the idea that it is your mission to manipulate the entire universe, when as a matter of fact the most of you wou'dn't do to leave in charge of one small backyard. Because a young man knows all about the square of the hyposbenuse, and can reel off chunks of Roman history, it does not necessarily tollow that there is a wild competition smong business men for his val uable services. If the employers of America never go lame until their legs give out from running after colleg; graduates there will be the soundest lot of underpinning on record in this country. Brudition is board on it in this town."

"But, sir," said the graduate, "the annals of every country in which the highest civilization has obtained show that it is the man of letters who shapes the destinies—"

"There you go sgain," said the horse reporter, "talking about shaping destinies and all such gruel as that. Don't you worry about destiny. The chances are that even if you were to fall over what you don't know and break your neck to-morrow somebody would look after the destiny-shaping business all right. Your best hold for the next year or two will be checking off barrels of Al sugar for some wholesale grocery house on River street. Destiny won't get left any in the meantime."

"Then you don't think I will be able to make my mark in the journ-

"But I might do some preliminary work," suggested the young man— "write some skelches and things of that kind."

"Yee you could do that." "What would you engy at for a none do plume." "Well," replied the horse reporter,

"I should say that 'affible imbenie would about fill the bill for you?"

"Good-day, sir. I will keep my eye on journalism and await an op-portunity to join its ranks."
"All_right," said the horse re-porter; "but in case the street car conductors get up another strike you had better remove your optic from journalism and head for the carbarus."—Chicago Tribuna

HOME COMFORT.

People.

"I wish to greefous some people would learn when they need a cactor, and when they don't," excisited Dr. E.—, as he entered his house in a cosy little village in the interior of the state of New York, efter a tedious night ride of many miles. "I have been down among the mountains to see a man, we other measurer said, was very sick and not likely to twe till morning, unless he had immediate help; and found him sufficing from a rather sharp state of colic, which his family might have relieved in ten minutes if they had a grain of rouse, and two or three simple remedies in the house. But not they must romain as ignorant as pigs, and when the least ache or pain attacks them, send for a dector; whether they ever pay him or not.

"Why, doctor, what kind of simple remedies, as you call them, do you expect people to keep in the house?" asked his wife, as she poured him a cup of hot tea.

"In this case," answered the doctor
